A rut is a depression or groove worn into a road or path by the travel of wheels or skis. Ruts can be formed by wear, as from studded snow tires common in cold climate areas, or they can form through the deformation of the asphalt concrete pavement or subbase material. Rut-like depressions can be formed on gravel roads by the erosion from flowing water.

When I was invited to talk on WESA with PennDOT and City of Pittsburgh about our roads, I discovered something interesting. The representative from the city seemed to genuinely want to fix things, but just simply seemed unaware of the issues (as opposed to the PennDOT guy who seemed to think the whole exercise was a waste of time).
